THE KRONICLE
YEAR BOOK
1933

VOLUME THIRTEEN

Published by
THE STUDENTS OF
THE KEENE NORMAL SCHOOL
KEENE, NEW HAMPSHIRE

Dedication

TO no one more fitting could an educational institution dedicate its 1933 Yearbook than to the memory of Oscar C. Gallagher, an outstanding instructor and a foremost educator. Although he has passed into a Greater Life, he has left with us a profound and lasting impression and a desire to attain the high educational ideals he held.

EDITORIAL

WITH the distribution of the 1933 Kronicle Yearbook, another book is added to the millions already in existence in the world. It is not a book which would mean much to someone in Illinois or California. This book is our own and half of its value lies in the memories and school-day thoughts that it arouses within us. To the Seniors it means graduation and it is a chronicle of the final year's outstanding events. To the undergraduates, it represents a year's work accomplished and is a guide to the further attainment of knowledge. As you turn the pages and a face pops up, you will think of that class or that ball, or that game which you attended. In years to come when the same face pops up, the same party, ball, or game will pop up with it, and also a smile for the queer clothes that were worn in 1933.

But our thoughts are on the present and the value of the book now. Here are outlined the events of this year, which will suggest accomplishments and failures you have met. May the book be an incentive to you to earn greater rewards,—the graduates "out in the world" and the undergraduates in the remaining years of their school life. If it does, we always may keep the value of the yearbook above par.

Marion Lathe,
Editor-in-Chief.

Senior President's Message

Before we cross the threshold that leads us into another world, a world of trials and tribulations, let us gaze back on scenes, and recall memories of days happily spent.

Some of us will make the crossing willingly and gladly, others reluctantly and in dread. Hitherto our life has been occupied in preparation, now we are to test our success. What we do now will depend quite as much on what we have done in the past, the use we have made of our opportunities, as what will be offered to us in the future.

This, undergraduates, is the substance of my message, especially to you who have just started. It is an old truth that it is a poor policy to build a house on sand. Lay a good foundation while you are about it. Enjoy yourselves, of course; you are young and life is good, but lay up a store of knowledge and good works. The day will come when you will wake to find yourself no longer dependent on an indulgent parent, or a teacher, but on your own ability and initiative.

To my classmates, first let me say that I am sorry, in a way, that this delightful association is to be broken; we have spent many happy and fruitful hours together, and stored up a host of treasured memories. We are men and women now, but let us not put away childish things altogether; let us keep them to remind us of old delights, and to keep us mellow and understanding for our work.

A last word: "Gather ye roses while ye may," and a few fruits for the winter besides. Shall we say au revoir friends?

—Martin Edward Heffernan,
(Class President of 1933)

EVENTIDE

Earth breathes a prayer at eventide
And mourns the day that's lately died.
The trees sigh out on peaceful air
The music of the sylvan prayer,
And dying day
Flings out her arms in groping way
As if to touch but once again
The beauty of the earth, and then
To die, without regret,
Content to let another take her place
As star within the vasty space,
Protector of the droves of men
Who merely bow the hushed amen.

—Mildred Holcomb.

LIFE

Oh, patient Teacher of mankind
How cruel thou art at times,
How hard it is for us to see
Without a gleam of light,
What is beyond our faltering step
What lies outside this night.
Plucking bright hope from happy breast
You give instead despair,
And the sorrowed thoughts unwelcome there
Burn a way in our very souls.
Though we may curse thee in blind wrath
And hate our cheated selves,
We are as children, yet unschooled,
So fail to see that life
Will bolt or open wide
The door to vast eternity.

—Mildred Holcomb.

CLOVER GRASS

I heard a bird at sunrise
Its song brought back to me
The memory of a clover field,
The hum and drone of bee.
Each blossom held a glistening drop
Of sun-struck gold and blue,
The tiny crystals put to shame
The arching rainbow's hue.
And I thought of the cities' din,
The lure of the dusty street,
The miles I had carried my heavy load
And tramped with weary feet.
Let me live in memory now,
All pleasures I'll gladly pass
To stand again, barefoot and ten,
In dewy clover grass.

It takes more than a thousand nuts to hold a car together, but only one to spread it over the road.

During a lecture a man in a back seat got up and said, "I can't hear the speaker."
Immediately an old gentleman in the front row arose and answered: "Sit down, man, and be thankful."

Miss Gregory (in geography): "What is the largest area you have seen containing absolutely no plant or animal life."
Barbara Goodell: "The Dead Sea."

"Gene" Lambert: "Set the alarm for two."

LIFE

I am riding on a train, which is going to Eternity
For all I know or care.
I watch the smoke cast shadows, dark and ominous,
On the white and driven snow
A symbol of our fate,——Destiny personified.

Life, Ashes, are but the ghost of someone else's fate
Cunningly coming back to haunt, and make our lives as theirs
Life, a place to blunder and spend the rest of life regretting
For the silly whims of Youth
Fondly bestowed on us by skeletons of yester year.

The train thunders on, and passes over a deep ravine
I gaze into the yawning dark abyss and think,
T'would be a pleasure to be swallowed up and live in death
But no! on, on, on, life, fate, hurling to self destruction
A cruel force which can't be met.

Pound, pound, pound, the monster engine grinds the miles away
As fate the monster demon will grind our lives
Then a piercing whistle whets the air, shatters the mind—
Stripping us bare of all the fake conventionalities
We vain would wear.

The train slackens, and then, the engineer a witless fool
Tolls the iron black molded bell
Which from its very bowels sounds solemnly a funeral dirge
I stand alone, and still it tolls, as would a death knell,
Which finds its own re-echo in a kindred soul.
Life-Fate.

—Barbara L. Goodell.

COME TO ME

Sky—come thee closer
I need thee evermore
Bring to me your azure
Enrich me with your glow.

Heavens—be a part of me
I feel thee in my soul
Grow in me your glory
And be my all—my whole.

3 H. J.

It was a very "Gus"-ty day when Fort "Rawstron" was attacked. The rain was "Peltonen (g)" down and the wind blew fiercely. But the soldiers were much in "Ernest" about the battle and forged bravely forward. They finally reached "Hartfiel (d)" where the battle would begin. The "Marshall" of the "Norman (s)" came from the fort and held a conference with the "Earl" of "Harris" and the "Duc (a)" of "Letizia". Nothing was settled so the battle commenced. All day the fight raged. The soldiers stopped only long enough to eat a piece of "Cunning ham" and then continued fighting.

Late in the afternoon our side seemed to be losing when suddenly "Pres" sped "—by" on his horse and said that "Lennart's son" and Commander "Tibbetts" had been shot on the "Dot". The soldiers were enraged and pressed on with such vigor that the "Norman (s)" surrendered and Fort "Rawstron" fell into the hands of "Frances" II.

Boys' Sports Summary 1932-1933

A new recreational program was introduced to the student body last fall by the athletic committee. The program has proved to be very successful. Varsity football was dropped. The program is under the leadership of Coach Caldwell with various committees under him.

The recreational program consisted of the following athletic events.

In the fall, varsity cross-country was introduced for the first time under the captaincy of Martin Heffernan, Portsmouth. Other fall sports were speed ball, badminton, golf, hiking, swimming, tennis, and classes in football coaching.

This winter varsity basketball was captained by Laurent Ruell, Ashland. Intra-mural basketball was also played. Volleyball, life-saving, and bowling completed the winter program. The seniors were high scorers and so received the banner on boys' sport's day which was held in March.

This spring baseball and track were the leading sports, but tennis was also very popular. All in all the 1932-1933 boys' recreational events were very worthwhile and successful.

Women's Athletics

K. N. S. is fortunate this year in securing Miss Marjorie Bateman to take the place of Miss Winifred Booth who resigned. Miss Bateman has had experience in normal schools as well as other institutions. The year has been very successful because of the fine cooperation shown by the girls to Miss Bateman and Miss Smith, her assistant.

The intra-mural program which was started last year has been strengthened a great deal, and bids fair to become a permanent establishment at K. N. S. It seems to be the only effective method of reaching that goal which is an American sports ideal—"all sports for all, and all in all sports." A new institution in the form of Sports' Days held seasonally in Fall, Winter and Spring has been adopted.

There was much enthusiasm and enjoyment in the division and class hockey in the fall, with the climax coming in the Red and White game on Fall Sports' Day. The Reds won this game, but the Whites reciprocated by winning the Field Ball contest, a new sport at K. N. S.

After Thanksgiving, basketball was started. In the elimination tournament for divisions, the 2H.R.'s and the 3H.J.-H.E. division tied. The class games were played in a round-robin tournament and the Sophomores were victorious. The Red and White game capped these tournaments, and the Whites won.

There were only two games with Plymouth this year but the girls' varsity squad spent over a month of hard, strenuous practice in preparation for them. They were coached by Miss Barbara Smith and they owe a great deal to her. Although they lost both games of the season, they are not discouraged and will be out next year to try to even things up with Plymouth.

Although the Rifle Club has not shot matches with other schools, it has added many new members and has been progressing under the leadership of Mr. Keech.

Swimming, bowling, badminton, volley ball, and shuffleboard have been increasingly popular and were participated in by many students. Dancing classes in tap, athletic, and natural dancing have been coached by Miss Bateman and Miss Smith.

(Would you believe it? It's really me. I'm all out of original and witty thoughts - but I've enjoyed being in classes with you - Here's luck to you - (and me) in practice Teaching next year.

WHERE GO THE STARS

Where do all the stars go
That shine and shine all night
And who goes round and puts them out
Before its even light.

We've got a lamp lighter on our street
Who turns each lamp down dim,
But he hasn't got to Heaven yet,
So I know it can't be him.

But tell me where the stars do go
That twinkle and shine all night
I want to know who puts them out.
Before the morning light.

GOD

Stars in the sky,
Moonbeams above,
A baby's low cry
A mother's love,
There's God.

Flowers that bloom,
Grass new and sweet,
A dark still room,
Friends that you meet,
There's God.

Trees that grow tall,
The sun in its bower,
Ivy climbing the wall
Of a massive tower,
There's God.

—Marion A. Brown.

WHY?

My spirit is beaten is trampled, is low but my love still lingers and refuses to go down to the depths that my soul has reached from the heights of a glorious love.

Why can't we go on eternally loving and being loved?
Why must there be an ending?

Perhaps the answer is in God's earth
the sunset;
the moonrise,
the first rose;
the last breath
of Life;
all are transitory
even as Love.

—Doris A. Swanson.

JEWELS

Sliding, streaming through my fingers
Begging to be handled.
The cold diamonds winking at the brightness of the world.
Holding clasped within their memories
Secrets of bygone days.
Warm rubies, warming my heart,
Voluptuous, sensuous stones.
The cool emeralds, stately and green,
Visions of cool green grass
Lovely gardens and ladies
Clothed in soft silks, with Marble-like skins and burnished hair;
All roused by an emerald.
Opals reminiscent of flashing swords
And gallant youth.
Their intermingled colors running over with joy and beauty.
The cool amethyst, the haughty sapphire,
The soft topaz, and gloomy onyx,
All have their memories held fast in their hardness.

—Doris A. Swanson.

MAN

Man—
So arrogant—
So virile—
So assured—
Bound
As in the inquisition—
To the wheel
Of life—
Strangled—
By the silken—
Cords of loyalty
Friendship—even—
Love

How the gods must chuckle up above!

—Eugenia Lambert.

EXPERIENCE

Staggering along—shoved—jostled—trampled underfoot—
By this seething mass labelled humanity—
Came a searing realization of the nothingness of things
Then stark indifference—or was it but tragedy?

—Eugenia Lambert.

THE RAINBOW'S SECRET

I saw a rainbow in the sky,
Which broke through the shrouds of rain
A path of colors flung on high
An archway free from pain.

Then hope came surging over me
Again the mystic faith of old
The rainbow's secret now I see
And at it's end a wealth of gold.

—Barbara L. Goodell.

LOVE

My heart with love is pounding,
Beating against the tide,
Rushing, bubbling onward
Till the flood gates open wide.

Then with a tender murmuring
It tumbles to its goal
Until it flows most peaceful
Down deep inside my soul.

—Barbara L. Goodell.

NIGHT TIME

My Mummy is an angel,
She has star dust in her eyes,
And every night she cuddles me
And sings soft lullabyes.

And then we drift to Dreamland
Just Mummy own and me.
We take off shore in a crescent moon
And sail on a star-lit sea.

OUR THANKS

THE Kronicle Board wishes to extend its thanks to those persons who have supported them and aided them in compiling the 1933 yearbook. The editor wishes especially to thank all those people who assisted in the work of gathering, typing, and arranging the material for the book. Once more, also, the Kronicle Board has had the hearty cooperation of the Granite State Studio, the Cheshire Engraving Company, and the Sentinel Printing Company. We thank you for aiding us in making this another successful yearbook.

TO OUR ADVERTISERS OF PREVIOUS YEARS

Because of the prevailing economic conditions, we have deemed it the best policy not to solicit advertisements for the 1933 Year Book. We realize that since money is harder than ever to get, advertisements in a year book will be less productive than they heretofore have been. Consequently we have decided to omit advertisements as our own small contribution toward improving the situation. We are able to do it this year because we find ourselves possessed of a surplus left from last year's Kronicle—a very fortunate, and perhaps an unusual circumstance.

We wish at this time to express our sincere thanks and appreciation to our advertisers for the support they have so loyally given us in the past. We trust that we have deserved it, and that their support has been productive of business for them. We hope that in the future, should the need arise, they will consider us still worthy of their support.

THE KRONICLE,
By EDWARD L. PRESBY, Business Manager.
